COLUMBIAN BILLS. Arthur J. Heaney, one of the three Aldermen indicted for their part in the illegal expenditure of money for the Columbian celebration of year, appeared before the Commission re-audit the bills for the expenditures rday, and explained his share in the . He became excited and indignant at the questioning to which he was subjected. Mr. Heaney was called to testify in regard to the payment to the bandmaster, Deverell, for music Columbus Day. He said that when Mr. Deverell ad been engaged, the leaders of a number of bands went to him and objected to allowing Deverell to handle the money. Heaney promised to see that they were paid, and went to Deverell's house with que on Deverell's warrants, and saw that they were paid. He produced Deverell's receipts. He said he drew the money on Deverell's that they were paid. He produced Deverell's receipts. He said he drew the money on Deverell's warrants, after they had been indorsed by him, and turned it over to Deverell the same day.

When prodded with questions by Mayor Boody, Alderman Heanev grew red in the face and burst out: "It seems strange to me that a man living in the city of Brooklyn as long as I have lived in it should be brought here and catechised as if he was a common thief. I have lived in Brooklyn for over thirty years, and I have had more bother about this thing, and more annoyance and abuse than I ever had before in my life."

Later it came out that the irate Alderman was provoked by newspaper criticism. He was in such a mood, however, that he was ready to resent anything. When Assistant Corporation Counsel Greenwood put this question: "After you had seen the Brooklyn men paid, did you turn over all the money to Mr. Deverell?" he said hotly:

"What do you mean by all the money?" Pulling out the receipt, he continued: "I don't want you to ask such questions. I won't take them from Mr. Greenwood or any one else."

Mr. Greenwood soothed him by saying that he misunderstood the purport of the question, and said he meant whether the Alderman paid the Brooklyn band leaders and then gave Deverell the rest of the money, or gave it all to Deverell.

The matter of the reviewing stands was then taken up. Heaney said that he was still of the opinion that the amount of $11.400 paid for them was a just sum. He based this opinion on information from experts. No evidence would shake his opinion on this matter. He explained the verbal contract with Ross, and said that Pigott was asked to see that the stands were safe. He supposed that the latter purchased and paid for the lumber, because he was in better standing with the dealers than Ross. The hearing will be continued on Monday.

THE HUSBAND CALLED A "BLUEBEARD." COUNSEL SAYS HE DRAGGED HIS WIFE TO THE GRAVES OF HER TWO PREDECESSORS AND DECLARED SHE WOULD SOON LIE NEAR THEM.

Marie Theresa Ehlers is seeking a legal separation from her husband, John Ehlers, on the ground of cruelty, and a motion for alimony and counsel fee was made before Judge Pratt in the preme Court yesterday. The parties to the suit Supreme Court yesterday. The parties were married in July. 1882. The defendant was a widower with two children and the plaintiff a young girl. He had buried two wives. Mrs. Ehlers alleges that her husband's ill-treatment has made her a chronic invalid. He frequently threatened to kill her, she says, and called her vile names until he drove her from home, and she is now livuntil he drove her from home, and she is look ing with her parents.

Counsel for Mrs. Ehlers declared her husband to be a modern "Bluebeard." While it was true that he often took his wife out riding, it was only to drag her to the cemetery where his former wives were buried, and to tell her she would soon lie beside them. The defendant's affidavit denied all cruel treatment of his wife.

TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS BY THE TROLLEY.

The Brooklyn City Railroad Company has experimented with, or examined, a large number of socalled life-saving inventions to be used upon trolley cars to prevent fatal accidents. The decision has ched to adopt the device which has been approved by a legislative commission in Massachusetts. It was invented by Louis Phingst, a chusetts. It was invented by Louis Phingst, a master mechanic, employed by the West End Railroad Company, in Boston. The device is a platform of lattice work, with a rubber fender, which can be pulled out in front of the car about ten inches above the pavement. If a person is struck by it, he falls upon the lattice work and is carried along instead of being run over. Platforms will be provided at the ends of the car and the one in the rear can be pushed in. It costs about $55 to equip a car. The device has been tested in Boston.

In the suit of John Ausen to recover $15,000 as damages for personal injuries received in a trolley collision, a verdict awarding the full amount was given in the City Court yesterday. The defendant was the Brooklyn City Railroad Company. The plaintiff was driving an express wagon at Eighty-sixth-st. and Twenty-third-ave., in New-Utrecht, on May 30, when a trolley car on the Eensonhurst line at full speed struck the wagon and knocked him off, causing serious injuries.

AN UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.

From The Chicago Tribune. From The Chicago Tribune.

"Ever sit down at a table where there were just thirteen?" asked the man in the shaggy uister.

"Once." replied the man with the white spot in his mustache.

"Well, you never observed that any bad luck followed it, did you?"

"Why—haw—yes. Bad luck for most of the thirteen."

"Why—naw you thirteen."

"Any of them die?"

"Not that I know of. Never heard of any of them dying."

"Not enough victuals to go around?" queried the man with the snub nose.

"Who's talking about victuals? There wasn't wictuals."

WHITE PLAINS. The members of the gang who have been making things lively for the citizens of Westchester for things lively for the citizens of Westchester for several weeks, with two exceptions, were lodged in the county jail yesterday. They stole recently a whole carload of oats from J. B. Hargin, which was brought from Cailfornia and taken to Morris Park for Mr. Hargin's horsea. A ton of jaig lead was another prize which they secured. They have set fire to several dwellings. Some time ago a Pinkerton detective joined the gang, telling the members he was a cigarmaker, and they took him into their confidence and allowed him to associate with them in their doings. It was mainly on his testimony that the men have been arrested. Early yesterday morning Sheriff Duffy, with Deputy Sheriffs Verplanck, Stanfield, Underhill, Hart, Devanny and G'Mara, went to Westchester to capture the gang. Sheriff Duffy had with him bench warrants for the nine men. The deputies were dispatched in various directions, with orders to "bring every one of the gang to the Town Hail, which was carefully guarded by the Sheriff. At 1 o'clock the deputies had succeded in capturing seven of the gang, two being out of town. They were hand-cuffed and conveyed in a stage to Fremont, where they boarded a train and were taken to White Plains. The members of the gang in custody are Thomas F. years old, of No. 155 East Thirteenth-at., New-York. There is little doubt but Chardey committed suicide. A vial which contained a white sediment was found in the man's clothing. There were no marks or bruises of any kind about the body, which was identified by the dead man's brother-in-law. Chardey had been out of work for some time and was despondent. On Thanksgiving Day he told his wife and relatives that if something did not 'turn up' shortly, he would kill himself. Chardey was at one time an officer in the French Army.
